DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

Claim 1 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by U.S. Patent Application Publication Number 2004/0036298 to Hayakawa et al.

Hayakawa et al. disclose a vehicle door latch device having an open lever (21) displaceable from an initial position to an actuated position in response to a door opening operation of an outside open handle (27) of a door, a lock lever (30) for connection to an inside lock button (33) of the door and displaceable between a locked position and an unlocked position, an open link (22) displaceable between an engageable position in which a displacement of the open lever, toward the actuated position is transmitted to a ratchet pin (23) of a ratchet when the lock lever is in the unlocked position and a non-engageable position in which the displacement of the open lever toward the actuated position is not transmitted to the ratchet pin when the lock lever is in the locked position, a movable member (31) provided between the open link and the lock lever so as to transmit the displacement of the lock lever to the open link, an anti-panic spring (32) elastically connecting the lock lever with the movable member, wherein when the lock lever is displaced from the locked position into the unlocked position while the open lever is being in the actuated position by a first opening operation of the open handle, the lock lever is changed to the unlocked position against the spring force of the anti-panic spring without moving the movable member, wherein when the open lever is returned to the initial position after the first opening operation of the open handle, the movable member is displaced by the spring force of the anti-panic spring to move the open link to the engageable position (paragraph 0049), wherein each of the movable member and the lock lever are both coaxially pivoted on a same single common shaft (31a); and wherein the anti-panic spring is engaged on the same single common shaft between the lock member and the movable member (figure 5).

Applicant cannot rely upon the foreign priority papers to overcome this rejection because a translation of said papers has not been made of record in accordance with 37 CFR 1.55. See MPEP § 201.15.

Response to Arguments

Applicant's arguments with respect to claim 1 have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.

Conclusion

The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure. The following patents are cited to further show the state of the art with respect to vehicle latching devices:

U.S. Patent Number 6,629,711 to Gleason et al., U.S. Patent Number 6,126,212 to Fujihara, U.S. Patent Number 5,653,484 to Brackmann et al., U.S. Patent Number 5,188,406 to Sterzenbach et al., U.S. Patent Number 5,046,341 to Ogino et al., U.S. Patent Number 3,384,404 to Slattery.
